	For the International Competition of Research Papers “Law and Business: Evolution and Innovation”	page 3 of 19

- Fighting corruption using criminal law
- Arbitration manager as a subject of crimes related to bankruptcy.

2.2. The choice of topic is determined based on the approximate topics of the competition works (Appendix 1). The topic can also be proposed independently, taking into account the scientific direction of the competition “ Law and Business: Evolution and Innovation ”, comparative legal analysis of the legislation of the Russian Federation, countries of Asia, Africa, Latin America on the chosen topic (3-5 countries).

It is also possible to conduct a comparative legal analysis of the legislation of the EAEU and BRICS countries

2.3. Based on the results of the study, recommendations should be proposed for improving the legislation of the Russian Federation, taking into account the experience of foreign countries. The result of the study may be proposals for the harmonization of legislation that will contribute to the development of the economy and law of the future.

2.4. The study is divided into the following structural units: introduction, analytical part, conclusion, bibliography.

Introduction – the choice of research topic, its relevance and novelty are justified, the purpose and objectives of the research are formulated. When determining relevance, it is necessary to take into account that this is nothing more than identifying the degree of development of a topic, determining the place of research among similar ones in this area. In other words, it is necessary to show what has already been done in this area by others and what the author of this work needs to do. Establishing novelty involves showing the differences between the results obtained and those already known.

The purpose of the study is the main direction of research activity. This is what, in the most general form, should be achieved as a result of working on the research. Formulating a goal allows you to answer the question “Why is the research being conducted?”

Objectives are sequential steps that ensure the achievement of a goal. The research objectives specify the goal and determine the main content of the work.

The analytical part is a comparison of the legislation of different countries on the chosen topic. An analytical review of the literature on the topic is carried out, an analysis of certain scientific phenomena is provided in the aspect of the research problem. The analytical part can be divided into chapters.

Conclusion – the essence of the research results of the work is briefly stated, the data obtained are summarized in the form of conclusions and theses. In this case, it is necessary that the content of the conclusion be correlated with the tasks and content of the work. Another important point: conclusions must be formulated in a meaningful way, i.e. the results of the study are not simply named, but their essence is concisely revealed.

3. Conditions of participation in the Competition
